High Falls Conservation Area

Rivière Nation North Road
Casselman, Ontario

A Rich History

High Falls Conservation Area, formerly known as the Casselman Conservation Reservoir, was originally owned by the Village of Casselman. The land was purchased by South Nation Conservation (SNC) in 1984, following the construction of a weir across the South Nation River in 1966.

High Falls Conservation Area consists of two parcels of land, on both sides of the River, totaling 5.5 acres.

The area is known for its historical views, particularly of the ruins of the Old Coupal 1910 Dam, which still stands today.

Today it is enjoyed by visitors year round. The park is also home to many fishing derbies throughout the spring and summer.

A Natural Setting of Discovery

High Falls features picnic tables amongst many maple, ash, and willow trees, as well as a floating dock on-site. It is easy to see why this is a favourite spot for many picnic goers and avid anglers!

Anglers don't have to go far to catch some of the most sought after fish species in Ontario, including Walleye and Pike.

With parkland on either side of the River's edge, visitors will find everything that they need to
