

Yellow fish road

The Seaway News (Cornwall), Apr 29,
2010

The First Long Sault Brownies, Girl Guides and Pathfinders with the assistance of the South Nation Conservation Authority, participated in the Yellow Fish Road program on Wednesday, April 21. The group painted yellow fish along storm drains in the community to remind the public that whatever toxins are disposed of somehow manage to seep into the storm sewers, which go directly into our rivers and streams without treatment. The participants also went door to door handing out yellow fish shaped information flyers. Trout Unlimited Canada introduced the program almost 20 years ago, and since then 220 Communities across the country have participated. Pictured (L-R) are Cheyenne Auger, Pathfinder; Melissa Cleary, Girl Guide; Lindsay Clement, acting water resource specialist, South Nation Conservation Authority; and Lindsay Winters, Brownie.
