RUSSELL

Russell Township Mayor Ken Hill officially declared his intention to seek re-election in the fall when he filled out nomination papers last week.

Hill says that during his term, the municipality has dealt with some major issues, such as the provision of drinking water from Ottawa to the villages of Embrun, Russell and Marionville. "There are many more things to accomplish. One mandate is not enough. I want to continue working for the municipality," he says. "Many people have been asking me whether or not I would again. I want to reassure them."

A detailed campaign platform will be released at a later date. For the immediate future, Hill wants to concentrate on the important files. "I am still mayor and I will remain mayor at least until November."

Hill, who was a councillor before he was elected mayor four years ago, believes he provides what the township needs. "There are a thousand reasons why I am running again. I think that this municipality needs leadership and I believe I have the qualities of a leader and the necessary experience to continue on the course that we have laid out. I want the voters to see me as the best choice to move Russell Township forward."
