

SNC receives $78,650 for stream projects

South Nation Conservation's Dennis O'Grady (left), general manager and secretary-treasurer, and Bill Smirle (right), board chair, recently accepted a $78,650 Royal Bank of Canada Blue Water Project Leadership Grant from the banking institution's regional vice-president, Ann Morrison.

FINCH – South Nation Conservation (SNC)'s Stream Watch Program recently received a monetary infusion from the Royal Bank of Canada (RBC).

The RBC Foundation donated $78,650 to the local environmental association through the banking institution's Blue Water Project.

The leadership grant is for the establishment of a volunteer-driven program to assist SNC with monitoring local streams, and completing habitat restoration projects.

The two organizations recently celebrated RBC Blue Water Day with a stream bank cleanup along Findlay Creek in Ottawa.
